

Mississippi Day is meant to be a day where members of the public, alumni, UM faculty and staff, and prospective students and their parents visit our Oxford campus and engage with academic departments.

Engagement is meant to be in the form of an 'activation,' that is, an activity, hands-on demonstration, simulation, role-play, performance, cross-campus tour, lecture, athletic event, and/or anything else that enables families to interact with faculty in a fun and family-friendly setting geared towards academic discovery.

GOALS: Learning, fun, discovery, interaction, highlighting the positive work units do.
